The administrator gets all information about the purchased program in the "License" tab. You can create as many new users as you want. New users get exactly the same licenses as the administrator. After the purchase you can download the license in the "License" tab. It's easier than installing, updating and removing the actual program. The user will not have a "License" tab in the control panel. A new "License" tab can be added. Features The license file has a "timestamp" header in the first line. The line between the timestamp and the license file, where the program version is displayed is customizable. The license file can have a property to declare the program as a 32-bit or a 64-bit application. The version number is displayed when you open the license file. The license file has the following header License: Name: Application Name Publisher: The Publisher Name of the licensee: Name of the licensee License number: The ID of the license Product ID: The product ID of the program License expiration date: The expiry date of the license License Options An administrator can change the settings of the license file by right-clicking on it and selecting "Edit". The name of the new user is displayed in the "Title" line. The administrator can add a new line and change the settings of the new user. Administrator The administrator can use the "License" tab to add licenses to the program. The administrator can create as many new users as needed. The administrator can add their name in the "Licensee" line. The administrator can change all the user settings. End User The end user doesn't see any license file. Usage The license file is used to add licenses to the program. The license is applied on all end users. Get the.NET license library from: or from: Troubleshooting Click "Report a problem" in the "License" tab to report a problem. The administrator can see the list of problems by clicking "View all". The administrator can solve the problems by clicking "Solve". The administrator can get information about the solved problems by clicking "More information" License 82157476af
